I work closely with students and families through important academic, career, and study abroad decisions, helping them navigate higher education pathways with greater clarity, confidence, and direction.

My work involves supporting students through career exploration, profile building, university shortlisting, applications, and transition support, while also helping families understand the practical and emotional aspects of these journeys.

Over time, I have realised that guidance goes far beyond admissions alone. Every student has a different story, pace, personality, and aspiration, and my approach focuses on personalised, student-first support rather than one-size-fits-all counselling.

As both a counsellor and a parent of an international student myself, I bring a balance of professional experience and real-world understanding to the work I do with students and parents.
